Students accepted into the Master of Arts in Cinema and Media Studies program undertake a challenging two-year curriculum that spans core knowledge in media history, theory, criticism, to develop research, writing, and media-making skills in preparation for careers in academia, the arts, or media-related professions. Students are encouraged to work one-on-one with an engaged, diverse faculty composed of active distinguished media scholars and historians, and prominent film, video, and digital media artists. Our faculty are leaders in their fields and specialize in global media; gender, race, and ethnicity in media; journalism studies; political communication; and television and digital media. In addition, students have the rare opportunity to combine coursework in both theory and practice, completing either a written or media production thesis, with resources including a digital media lab and a television studio.
