Graduates of the Public History (Advanced Certificate) program at the College of Staten Island (CSI) will acquire academic expertise in the growing field of public history, as well as practical experience working in public history institutions such as museums, historical societies, or archives.

The program is particularly suitable for students pursuing or intending to pursue graduate programs in History. Post-baccalaureate staff and docents at public history institutions who wish to expand their credentials, knowledge, and skills will also benefit from the program.

DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

The Public History (Advanced Certificate) program is a 20 credit program consisting of three core courses and two specialist courses in Public History. The core courses include a four-credit practicum/internship course at a Public History institution such as a museum, archive, historical society, or historic site.

Core Courses:
- Introduction to Historical Method
- Seminar in Public History
- Public History Practicum/Internship

Specialist Courses (select two):
- Archival Studies
- Archival Studies Practicum
- Museum Studies
- History of New York

Students enrolled in the History MA Program can simultaneously complete the History MA and Public History (Advanced Certificate) program by successfully taking the following nine courses (for a total of 36 credits):

- Introduction to Historical Method
- Seminar in Public History
- Public History Practicum/Internship
- Two specialist courses in Public History
- Four History MA courses from five areas of concentration (each course must cover a different area). The five areas of concentration are: History of Africa and the Middle East; History of Asia; History of Europe; History of Latin America and the Caribbean; History of the United States
ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

- Baccalaureate degree or current enrollment in a graduate program in History or a related field.
- Overall grade-point average of 3.0 or higher in undergraduate courses.

Students currently enrolled in the History MA program at the College of Staten Island (CSI) are eligible to complete the Public History (Advanced Certificate) alongside their MA studies.

Students not enrolled in the History MA program at the College of Staten Island (CSI) may apply for admission to complete the Public History (Advanced Certificate) by itself or simultaneously with the MA in History. Applicants for the Public History (Advanced Certificate) should consult the timetable for admission for the MA program in History.
