

Verrazzano Honors Credit for SLS 301, 302, and 303

To receive Verrazzano Honors credit for taking SLS 301, 302, and/or 303, you will need to write and submit (via email) a blog post to the Verrazzano Honors program. It will consist of a written document and at least one photo.

For the written portion:

In at least one and no more than two typed pages, reflect on how the course materials in the era under study (ancient, medieval, modern) make sense to you vis-a-vis your own personal time frame and culture. For example, you may be interested in examining your thoughts about women and education in your life with Virginia Woolf's experience and writing with regard to women's education.

While the blog needs to be well-written and free of grammatical and typographical errors, it can be less formal than typical scholarly writing. You may use the first person and approach the material with humor and thoughtfulness. Please include at the end of the blog captions for the photo(s) you will submit. You will submit this as a word document to cheryl.craddock@csi.cuny.edu.

Please submit at least one photo of yourself to include in the blog. You are also welcome to submit images that support your reflection. For example, if you are a scientist and are reflecting on how science was viewed in medieval times, you could include an image of you in a lab and an image of what a medieval scientist might look like or be doing. Please make sure the images are not copyrighted or are part of the public domain. Please submit individual images separately (not embedded in the blog).

These blogs will be posted on the Verrazzano Voyager. Credit for the Honors Section will not be given until the blog has been received and approved by the Verrazzano Honors Program.
